Planning

Scouts should be actively involved in the planning for a successful trip.

- Templates are provided in this guide that can be used to plan menus, shopping lists, duty rosters, and transportation.
- To help it is strongly encouraged that you reach out to potential bridging Troops and invite a Scoutmaster/Assistant Scoutmaster to participate in the planning and if possible to even attend with your den. You may also want to consider if you can use Troop equipment (tents, patrol boxes, etc).
- Allow the scouts to plan their own menu. It doesn't need to be complex, but you may want to consider challenging them to do something more than cereal or poptarts. Encourage them to learn about each other's likes and dislikes to help them bond as a patrol and come up with a menu that they will all enjoy. Learning to plan and eat meals together can help develop patrol bonds.
- Allow the scouts to figure out their own shopping list, quantities and to do their own shopping. Consider whether the item(s) they forget will cause significant discomfort or a learning experience that later will be reflected on as the time they overcame. Some of the best trips can be remembered as the time we had meatless sandwich.

The campsite checklist attached is to help leaders guide scouts about proper campsites, but will not be used to judge or score any pack/den.

When registering, Pack/Den Leaders will need to register each scout by rank, with their choice of BB's/archery/wrist rockets for their shooting sports choice. Leaders will also need to know if the scout will be participating in the Derby when registering. Only those who will only participate in the Pinewood Derby will be allowed to enter and register on Saturday on site, but if they wish to travel anywhere beyond the Dining Hall they will have to pay as a camper and pay registration fees.
